COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines the impact of the cultural phenomenon labeled “Hip Hop.” Although music does not constitute the whole of Hip Hop culture—it dominates—with fashion (urban fashion) and novels (urban & gangsta fiction) running close seconds. Therefore, the course examines rap music as an artistic and sociocultural phenomenon with emphasis on its impact on the sexual politics within this sphere of cultural production and social relations and how that influence has (re)shaped the ways in which Black bodies are being cast and re-cast on national and global scales. In addition to lyrical and visual representations of Black bodies and of gender relations, critical analysis will focus on the history of rap, the place of hip hop within the structure and culture of American society, different genres and the personalities that introduced them, and the exploitation of hard core rap as a commodity for national and global consumption. Because this is a Black Studies course (and not a music appreciation course), the tenets of the discipline will be discussed in reference to the development of the genre focusing mostly on the music and music videos. From a cultural perspective, the course will explore what function the phenomenon currently serves within the Black community.

Objectives

The objective of the course is to promote a critical discourse centered around the sexual politics of hip hop and its impact on perceptions of what it means to be a person of African descent in 21st century USA. Through critical analysis and debate, students will analyze key issues associated with representations of Black bodies and be able to define sociological and cultural phenomena (concepts) that inform those representations.

Obscene and Offensive Material

In this course, you will be required to listen to, view, and analyze obscene and offensive materials, including language and imagery that is obscene, sexist, homophobic, or racist, and descriptions of sexual conduct and violence. The professor, the African American Studies Program, nor the university share in the opinions of the artists who created this offensive material. However, it is important to understand that these materials speak to issues, debates, and controversies that are essential to this course; therefore, no suitable substitutions are available, and none will be provided.

By continuing with this course, you are agreeing to be held academically accountable for all required materials in the syllabus, regardless of their offensive nature. Students who are unwilling either to hear or think critically about such materials are advised not to continue with the course.
Requirements and Evaluation

Attendance and Assignments. Students are expected to attend all class sessions prepared to discuss (at length and in depth) the selected musical works, videos, lyrics/text, reading assignments, and issues related to the course materials. While it is understood that each student’s personality differs and this may impact the degree of participation all students will be given opportunity to show that they have prepared themselves for class by completing the reading assignments and making a contribution to the class discussion. (NOTE: The instructor reserves the right to make adjustments in the assignments based on the needs and progress of the class.)

Required Texts and Video. The following text and videos are required readings/viewings:
White, Miles. 2011. From Jim Crow to Jay-Z: Race, Rap, and the Performance of Masculinity by (Book Store)
Hip-hop: beyond beats and rhymes (DVD Library West Course Reserve)
Other assigned readings will be available through the Library West electronic course reserve. (CR = Course Reserve)

Class Twitter Account. Each morning prior to class, students are to post an original tweet of a “concept/idea related to the reading assignments” for discussion in class. The key to the student contribution is “originality,” which means the comment should come as a result of the student’s own critical analysis and not copied from the readings nor from his or her fellow classmates’ contributions. The comment is limited to 140 characters. A good way to begin your contribution is by making notes on the purpose the author had for writing the article and the major points made in that article. After analyzing your notes, construct your tweet around the point that stands out as most relevant for the course. In other words the tweet should have significance for Black life or history and relate to hip hop and/or rap music. The course Twitter account will be set up by the instructor and student tweets are to begin on Week 2.

Special Topic Presentation. Each student will make two presentations. Presentations will consist of the presentation of a short lecture based on the assigned readings for the date of presentation and at least one unassigned chapter from the required textbooks plus a song, film or TV show that in some way reflects the content of the readings. The presenter will choose key issues from the chapters and explain how they are reflected in the choice of media. In the presentation the student should be certain to address how the issues impact the day-to-day lived experiences of African Americans. There will be a Doodle Sign-in page distributed on Thursday January 8th for students to choose their specific presentation day. Each presentation is to be 15 minutes long, which includes a 5-minute Q & A period. Missed presentations will only be made-up when accompanied by excused absences.

CLASSROOM RULES & DECORUM & OTHER RELATED POLICIES

Evidence of collusion (working with someone not connected to the class or assignment), plagiarism (use of someone else’s published or unpublished words or design without acknowledgment) or multiple submissions (submitting the same work for different courses) will lead to the Department’s and the University’s procedures for dealing with academic dishonesty. All students are expected to honor their commitment to the University’s Honor Code and the student conduct code. If you are unsure whether your activities are legitimate regarding paper writing and exam taking, please do not hesitate to ask me.
