

ANT 2000

GENERAL ANTHROPOLOGY

Anthropology is constantly advancing new ideas to help us better understand our own cultures, the cultures of others, and our links to the past. The diversity of knowledge that emerges from anthropology helps us to better understand and address the challenges that face humanity today.

This introductory course explores the four sub-fields of anthropology (cultural, biological, linguistic, and archaeology) & introduces students to the different ways that anthropologists study humanity.

This course will introduce students to the different ways that anthropology is used to advance our knowledge of humanity and the innovative practices being employed today.

ENROLL NOW FOR SUMMER B! (ANT 2000-4104)

email burgen@ufl.edu for more info